WILL BE READY FOR DEDICATION

Little Remains to be Done at New St. James Church and all will be in Readiness for Dedication on Sunday, September 15.

With the date for dedication less than a month distant the new St. James church is now practically completed save for the laying of the carpet in the main church auditorium and the installation of the pews. Neither carpet nor pews have yet arrived but both are expected shortly.

The pews, which will be of attractive design, will be received from a firm in Williamsport. The carpet is of pretty design and will conform to the other furnishings of the main auditorium, making the room one of the most handsome in Gettysburg. It was originally intended only to have "runners" in the aisle but the ladies of the church decided that they wanted to cover the entire floor. With the first plan in view a hard wood floor was laid, which will now be completely covered.

That all will be in readiness for the dedicatory services on Sunday, September 15, is assured. The exterior of the church is practically complete except for the erection of the light standards at the front. The terraces about the church and at the rear of the parsonage have been built up, the concrete work at the outside of the church has been finished for several weeks and the structure makes a very attractive appearance.

Heavy iron railings have been put up at the steps leading to the various exits and a passageway to the basement from the Stratton street side was also built of concrete. The pavement above the church and in front of the parsonage is considerably above the old grade and sets off both buildings to advantage.

The program of the dedication has not yet been announced and will not likely be definitely arranged until the return of the pastor, Rev. J. B. Baker, from his summer vacation. It is hoped to have present a number of the former ministers of the church and a series of meetings lasting a week will mark the completion and consecration of the new edifice.

BIG THEATRICAL SEASON

Gettysburg people who, in past years, have enjoyed the theatrical offerings at the Hanover Opera House will be glad to know that a long list of fine attractions is promised for this fall and winter. Other shows promised, but for which the dates have not yet been announced are, "Madame Butterfly," "The Price," "Bunt Pulls the Strings," "The Spring Maid," "The Quaker Girl," "Mutt and Jeff," "Excuse Me," "The Merry Widow," and "Madame Sherry."

INSTANT DEATH ON RAILROAD

George A. Myers Killed Instantly Near Leidsburg, Station Near Boiling Springs on Road from Gettysburg to Harrisburg.

Shortly before 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, George A. Myers, a farmer, was struck and instantly killed by a westbound freight train on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad near Leidsburg's Mill, a station on the Philadelphia and Reading east of Boiling Springs.

Myers, with a companion, Harry Criswell, were walking across the tracks at the J. A. Davis flour mill. Two trains were going in opposite directions. The men stepped off one track to the other, and in doing so Myers was struck by the second train, the approach of which was unnoticed because of the noise made by the first train.

Myers' body was thrown several feet against Criswell, who was nearly knocked under the second train. The first train was stopped and Myers' body was taken aboard and carried to Boiling Springs.

Both Myers and Criswell were employed for a time at the J. A. Davis Mill and were going to Leidsburg station to help unload a load of flour.

Mr. Myers was 55 years old and is survived by a wife and six or seven children. He was employed by Mr. Davis for about two and a half years. He was a member of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, and a man well liked in his community. His sad and startling death is a most severe blow to his family who have the sincere sympathy of many friends.

Mr. Myers was killed instantly, but his body was not badly mutilated.

He is carrying with him between 1,300 and 1,500 chickens, ducks, pigeons and other birds. They will go direct to Courtland, N. Y., where they will exhibit at the state fair this week. In order the next stops will be made at Norwich and Pen Yan, N. Y.

The first section, consisting of two cars and 900 birds in charge of S. G. Hoke, senior member of the firm, left last week and is exhibiting in New York state. The section of four cars will split into two sections after the Pen Yan fair. One will be given in charge of Harvey Stambaugh. The three parties will be attending various fairs in the New England and Eastern states until late in October.

COLLISION COST OXFORD MAN $5

Ran into Conewago Township Man's Team at Hanover, with Bad Results. Claim Carelessness was partly Responsible.

Harry Mumma, of New Oxford, was arrested in Hanover for reckless driving and fined $5, after he had collided with a vehicle, serious results being narrowly avoided.

The automobile which is owned by C. J. Myers, of New Oxford, collided with a buggy driven by Edward Schuchart, of Conewago township. The accident occurred in front of Hotel Hanover. The automobile was in charge of Harry Mumma, of New Oxford, and there were several young men in the machine with him.

He had passed around the square and was going down Carlisle street, at the time the team of Schuchart was crossing Carlisle street from East Chestnut street. Mumma, it is said, did not blow his horn and the occupants of the buggy did not observe the approaching auto. The machine hit the front part of the vehicle, smashing the wheel, breaking the shafts, and throwing the horse to the street.

Schuchart and Claude Keagy were thrown out of the buggy, while a young man by the name of Polst, who was also in the buggy, received a shaking up. The front of the auto was damaged by the contact, but the machine was able to continue on its way home. The horse was caught a short distance away.

Mumma was arrested after the accident by Officer Whaler, and at a hearing before Burgess Sheely, was fined $5 for reckless driving.

CAUGHT A GOLDEN RATTLER

Col. Dan O. Gebr who is summing up at Graffenburg hills, Saturday killed the first golden rattler reported this season. It was over three feet long and carried ten rattlers. The reptile was game to the last, first showing a disposition to pursue its assailant rather than run away. The skin, which Colonel Gebr has preserved, is a brilliant yellow with the usual gray markings. It was caught among the boulders on the David H. Riddle lots on the hills. Its mate was captured next day.

Rush Dittman, now at his Graffenburg cottage, Sunday added another to his collection of sixteen snake trophies of this season, the skin of a big copperhead. Mr. Dittman's collection at the end of last season reached almost fifty.

In the South Mountain rattlesnakes are reported less numerous than last season while copperheads are more plentiful.

KICKED BY MULE

Orlando S. Kump, tenant on the farm of the Forney estate, along the Littlestown pike, near Hanover, was kicked by a mule and had several ribs broken.

Mr. Kump, who moved from the H. D. Sheppard farm to the Forney farm, April 1st, was engaged in plowing during the afternoon, and after he had placed the horses which he had used in the stable, went to take the harness off of a mule which had been worked in the morning. As he walked to the animal, it gave evidences of dissatisfaction, and Mr. Kump saw it was going to kick. Mr. Kump threw up his arm to save himself from being hit in the face. The man was struck on the left side, knocking him to the ground in an unconscious condition. After regaining consciousness, he crawled out of the stable, where he was found by one of the hirelings. Dr. Charles A. Keagy was called, who reduced the fracture. Mr. Kump is now resting comfortably.

SAVE YOUR HAIR

Don't Use Preparations Containing Poisonous Sugar of Lead or Sulphur

Even if you have healthy hair you ought to use a little PARISIAN Sage once a week as a hair dressing. It keeps the hair healthy; prevents scalp itch, falling hair and dandruff, and baldness.

But be sure you get PARISIAN Sage. There are many imitations. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every carton and bottle of PARISIAN Sage.

It banishes dandruff, stops falling hair and scalp itch, and imparts to the hair a brilliancy and lustre that all women as well as men love so dearly. PARISIAN Sage is a daintily perfumed and refreshing hair dressing. It's the best hair tonic you can buy. Large bottle 50 cts. at The People's Drug Store and dealers everywhere.

Everyone Needs It

The People's and Huber's Drug Stores are selling the Wonderful Sage of Thompson's Barossa, the Mighty Kidney and Liver Specific.

And no wonder, when they offer to refund your money if it doesn't cure any disease of the kidneys, liver or bladder, backache, sideache, nervousness or any weakness of the kidneys.

But Thompson's Barossa has made so many almost miraculous cures that The People's and Huber's Drug Stores are pretty certain not to have any returns.

Here are a few instances:

Frank K. Sturges, Staunton, Crawford county, Pa., was cured of Bright's disease six years ago and only took six bottles. He has had no bad symptoms since.

"I had kidney trouble and enlargement of the liver and spleen. I took Thompson's Barossa. The first bottle reduced the measurements around my stomach from 45 to 36 inches, and several bottles completely cured me."

—M. S. Langworthy, Tryonville, Pa.

After suffering the terrible agony of rheumatism for ten years, being compelled to use crutches, J. N. Dunn, Troy Center, Pa., after all hope had left him, and he had no faith in any remedy, took six bottles of Thompson's Barossa, threw away his crutches and went to work, for the first time in ten years.

These statements are absolutely true and the Thompson Medical Co., Titusville, Pa., will prove it. Then why should anyone suffer in the face of such facts? How can they suffer when The People's and Huber's Drug Stores guarantee to refund the money if a cure is not effected? Thompson's Barossa 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

WANTS COURT TO DECIDE ON TOLLS

President Asks Congress to Show America's Fairness.

OTHER NATIONS COULD SUE

Mr. Taft, in Message, Urges Legal Test of Free Canal Tolls Before United States Supreme Court.

Washington, Aug. 20.—President Taft closed a day of conferences on the Panama canal bill with a special message to congress, suggesting the passage of legislation which would permit American ships to travel the canal toll free, and which would also allow foreign nations to test the legality of this provision by suits in United States courts.

The president discussed the message with senators and members of the house, and its wording was finally decided upon at a meeting of the cabinet.

The message was read in congress soon afterward, and will be taken up by committees in both houses.

It was the belief here that an effort would be made to meet the president's wishes, although some leaders, particularly in the house, were inclined to believe that the message means no further action in regard to the canal at the present session.

Mr. Taft explained that he was anxious to sign the present bill, but wished to assure other governments of the spirit of fairness on the part of the United States.

The president was told that an act of congress would have the effect of abrogating any treaty previously agreed to, and the decision of the supreme court over the Chinese exclusion act was given as authority for the statement. His suggestion to congress for additional legislation designed to prevent any such construction as that of the supreme court in the Chinese case would allow foreigners to try their cause in the United States courts.

The proposal to submit the question to the supreme court read as follows:

"That nothing contained in the act entitled an act to provide for the opening, maintenance, protection and operation of the Panama canal, and the sanitation and government of the canal zone, shall be deemed to repeal any provision of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, or to affect the judicial construction thereof, or in any wise to impair any rights or privileges which have been or may be acquired by any foreign nation under the treaties of the United States relative to tolls or other charges for the passage of vessels through the Panama canal, and that when any alien, whether natural person, partnership, company, or corporation, considers that their charging of tolls or the enforcement of any other regulation under and pursuant to the provisions of this act violates in any way any such treaty rights or privileges, such aliens shall have the right to bring an action against the United States for a redress of the injury which he considers himself to have suffered, and the district courts of the United States are hereby given jurisdiction to hear and determine such cases and to decree the appropriate relief, and from the decision of such district courts there shall be an appeal by either party to the action to the supreme court of the United States."

Continuing the message said: "I am sure that it is not the intention of congress to violate the Hay-Pauncefote treaty or to enact anything inconsistent with its provisions, and that it certainly is not its purpose to repeal, by subsequent enactment, the treaty, in so far as it represents the law of the land. It is of the highest importance, however, that this attitude should be made clearly known to the nations of the world and that we should avoid any apparent justification for criticism."

DR. SUN YAT SEN REPORTED MURDERED

First President of China Said to Have Been Slain.

San Francisco, Aug. 20.—The Young China Association of San Francisco was greatly excited by receipt of cable news that Sun Yat Sen had been assassinated.

Soon after he set out from Shanghai for Peking the association communicated with the Chinese minister in Washington, and received a telegram that he, as well as the state department, had received similar messages that Sun was dead.

The message from the Chinese minister said that the state department had vainly spent several hours trying to confirm the cable. One of the officers of the Young China Association said: "When we read that Doctor Sun Yat Sen had left Shanghai to go to Peking to ally the excitement caused by the execution of Chang Chen Wu we feared for his safety. We knew when he set out that he took his life in his hands."

"If he was assassinated, the crime may be traced to Yuan Shi Kai, who is jealous of the ascendancy of Sun, and would like to see him out of the way."

Sun Yat Sen was the prime organizer of the successful revolutions which put an end to the Manchu rule in China. He was the provisional president of the newly formed republic, held the control of it for six weeks, and then sent word to Yuan Shi Kai to come to Peking and be elected regularly the president of the republic of China.

Norristown, Pa., Aug. 20.—Because he had never kissed a girl and did not want to begin at his life of John J. Gallagher, of East Penn street, was sent to jail for thirty days.

He was arraigned before Justice O. F. Lehnardt, charged by his wife with assault and battery. From the testimony of the couple it looked to the magistrate as a case of six of one and a half dozen of the other, so he advised them to "kiss and make up."

"Met, not," exclaimed Gallagher. "Why, I never kissed a girl in my life, and I won't begin now."

"Well, the only thing for me to do is to fine you then," said the justice. As Gallagher could not produce the necessary money he was sent to jail.

SCHEPPE'S BACKS UP ROSE'S STORY

Alleged Rosenthal Murder Paymaster in Cell.

CLASH WITH THE POLICE

Detectives Try to Take Witness Away From the District Attorney—Says Becker Instigated Murder.

New York, Aug. 20.—Sam Schepps, alleged paymaster of the murderers of Herman Rosenthal, came back to Broadway with a statement on his lips, corroborating the confession of "Bald Jack" Rose, charging Police Lieutenant Becker with instigating the murder.

For two hours Schepps and District Attorney Whitman were in conference in a Pullman stateroom on a New York Central train, speeding south from Albany, and when the train reached New York, Mr. Whitman said simply:

"Schepps has done all that we expected of him. He has corroborated the most important part of Jack Rose's confession. You must not ask me for details."

Opposing interests of the district attorney's office and the police were again in evidence when Schepps arrived. Two detectives from headquarters, saying that they were acting on orders, attempted to seize the little man before he left the train, but Mr. Whitman was quick to announce that his office was in command, and the detectives did not get their man.

Instead he was taken to the West Side police court by Thomas, a detective of the district attorney's staff, and there held a prisoner on a technical charge of vagrancy as a material witness, along with Rose, Vallon and Webber.

Schepps himself refused to say a word about his conference with Mr. Whitman. To all inquiries he gave a grinning response that they had "just had a sociable chat." As to his fear of the "system's" vengeance, he grinned again and tilted back his straw hat as indicative of his unconcern.

Of the authorities, Mr. Whitman alone knows what part Schepps played in the Rosenthal affair. To all others, including Assistant District Attorney Rubin, who accompanied him from Hot Springs, Schepps turned a deaf ear. "Say," he would burst out, when urged to tell of his underworld associations, "do you think I'm going to squeal on a pal?"

Bernard Sandler, counsel for Schepps, issued a statement on arriving in New York: "Schepps is not a criminal. He came across to a sudden end. On my advice as counsel to render whatever aid he can to the district attorney of New York in prosecuting the murderers of Herman Rosenthal. While he does not represent the highest type of citizenship, he is a man of no mean intellectual attainments, and he appreciates that, in coming to New York, as he has without legal process, he did so of his own free will, when he could at any time have seriously embarrassed the district attorney by a recourse to a writ of habeas corpus or other legal steps."

"I take this opportunity to deny that I have brought any pressure to bear on Schepps, as has been charged, to block the district attorney's inquiry, and I brand as ridiculous and false insinuations that in acting as counsel for Schepps I represent the so-called 'system.'"

Lieutenant Becker made a brief appearance in the court of general sessions to plead to the indictment charging murder in the first degree. At the request of counsel the pleading was adjourned until Wednesday.

Counsel for Becker made a new motion to inspect the minutes of the grand jury, to which Judge Crain made no comment. Becker appeared cheerful.

Mr. Whitman regards Schepps' testimony of importance as confirming the tale of "Bald Jack" Rose. Schepps was not in the murder car at the time of the shooting, but he was in it earlier in the evening, and, according to Rose, subsequently was the paymaster of the murder crew.

PITTSBURG EXPECTS MUCH OF ART HOFMAN

Artie Hofman, Former Cub, With the Pirates.

Artie Hofman, once the idol of Chicago Cub fans and considered by many as the best all-round player in the major leagues, is expected to strengthen the Pittsburgh Pirates materially by the enthusiastic fans of that city. Manager Fred Clark, also is optimistic, and expects his team to climb rapidly toward the head.

Hofman was the property of the Pittsburgh club once before. Fred

Clarke tells how in 1904 he couldn't use Hofman, and placed him with the Des Moines club. The understanding was that Hofman was to come back to Pittsburgh, but the Des Moines club sold him during the season and the owners didn't abide by the verbal agreement. While with the Chicago Cubs Hofman filled almost every position on the diamond, being available anywhere.

STORIES OF THE DIAMOND

The American league race is getting tighter and tighter each day.

Any time that Hank O'Day wants to beat the Phillies he should "let George (Suggs) do it."

Another shakeup in the White Sox may be expected any day if the slump does not come to a sudden end.

Louisville has sold infielder Casey Smith, secured from the Chicago Cubs, to the Columbia team of the South Atlantic league.

With Patience playing second base and Lesaire pitching, one would expect East Liverpool, Ohio, to play a rather sleepy game.

Young Groh of the Giants will not go after the bad ones. Pitchers have got to put the ball over the plate before he will offer at it.

Jake Stahl of the Red Sox says he does not think it will be necessary for the team that wins the flag this year to win over ninety games.

George Stovall, the new Browns' manager, made his big league debut in 1904. And after all these years he has sunk to his present low station.

There may be a race in the National league this year, but it will be between Frank Schulte's and Christy Mathewson's high-powered automobiles.

Ernie Lush, who has been playing in the outfield for Montreal, has been let out and will try to get on with the Springfield team of the Connecticut league.

Providence gave Catcher Harry Beckendorf his unconditional release.

Catcher Fred Mitchell is back in the game for Buffalo after a trip to Bonaventure Resee.

Player Free of Auburn in the Mink league is a free hitter. He leads the league at bat with an average above .400. Nebraska City as a team leads in batting, with four men batting .300 or better.

MAKES GAMES MORE EXCITING

Hitting the Ball Safely is Most Interesting Feature of Contests for Enthusiastic Fans.

The so-called "inside" baseball playing is all right and results in many successful plays on the diamond. Strong and consistent playing, however, is the mainstay of any club.

When a player approaches the plate the uppermost thought in the minds of spectators is "Will he hit the ball?"

If the ball is struck and hit safely the spectators are happy. Hitting the ball safely is the most interesting feature of the game, says the Boston Globe.

It is noticeable this season that the players are hitting the ball well. They seem to have made up their minds that free and easy hitting is preferable to bunting. This free hitting makes the games more exciting. To be sure, it may mean a larger score, but that is not to be deplored. When there is free hitting there are more chances for brilliant catching, skillful fielding and fast running. The scene is more animated and fascinating. The more batting there is the better pleased patrons will be all during the season.

$7,000 IS PAID FOR KEATING

That Sum is Given by New York Highlanders for Crack Twirler of the Lawrence Team.

The Highlanders have bought the release of Ray Keating, the brilliant young pitcher of the Lawrence club of the New England League.

Word was received from Lawrence recently that Louis Pieper, manager of the Lawrence team, had announced that the New York Americans paid $7,000 for Keating, a larger sum than ever was paid for a New England League player.

This deal has been hanging fire for some time. It was said that Keating will not join the New York club until the end of the New England League season, but after paying this sum for the youngster the Highlanders may request immediate delivery.

Keating is only nineteen years old, and until last season was content to play on a high school nine. Jim O'Rourke dug him up in the spring of 1911, and he had a brief trial with Bridgeport. From Bridgeport, Keating drifted to Lawrence, which club turned him over to the Hamilton team of the Canadian League, where he was a star.

He was recalled by Lawrence and has been doing wonderful work all season.

His first noteworthy feat was to hold the Providence International team to two hits in a practice game. Since the New England season opened, the youngster has not met with a defeat. His greatest triumph was scored on May 25, when he shut out Worcester, 1 to 0, without a hit.

PRESERVE FOES' HEADS

SOUTH AMERICAN TRIBE THAT EMBALMS THE TROPHIES.

Method Employed Reduces the Grizzly Relics to the Size of a Billiard Ball With Changing or Mutilating Features.

The little-known Indian tribes that inhabit the more distant provinces of the South American republic of Ecuador, in almost entire independence, have a strange custom of preparing the heads of their vanquished enemies in a manner which reduces them to extremely small dimensions, without changing or mutilating the features.

For many years a war of extermination has been going on between the various tribes. Ambushes and night attacks are of frequent occurrence, and the parties often march dozens of leagues to surprise their enemies.

The head of the vanquished chief is cut off and becomes the most esteemed trophy of the victorious leader. It is then, in due time, desecrated and reduced by the latter by means of a process, the secret of which has so far been jealously guarded. As far as is known, the skull, jawbones and fleshy parts are entirely removed without the skin of the head and face suffering any damage, and the only trace of the operation is a small incision in the nape of the neck which is afterward sewn together again.

After removal of the bony and softer parts of the skull the skin is filled with hot stones and a vegetable concoction, the secret of which, as well as that of the process, is carefully guarded. This procedure is continued until the head is shrunken to the dimension of a good-sized billiard ball and has become as dry and tough as sole leather.

It is remarkable that during the process neither the natural luster of the hair nor its quantity is diminished, that eyebrows and lashes remain intact, and that even the grain of the skin with the fine hairs are plainly distinguishable after the preparation is completed.

The process lasts about one year, and the head during that time hangs in smoke, for which purpose a stout string is drawn through the upper part of it. The lips are sewed together in order to prevent the dead enemy from speaking and eating, and the long threads by which it is done remain attached and hanging from the mouth.

The trophy, which by the reduction has lost its ghastliness, is kept in a niche in the hut of the chief, stuck on the end of a spear. During the three years succeeding the killing, feasts, lasting three days, are held on the anniversaries of the victory, during which the shrunken head is exhibited.

After three years the victor may dispose of his trophy in any way he sees fit, but this is rarely done, as the head forms a war trophy of the highest honor.

ONE BIG BATTLESHIP OUTCOME OF FIGHT

Conferees Agree to Build $15,000,000 Vessel.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Conferees on the naval appropriation bill agreed to provide for one battleship at a cost not greater than $15,000,000, and the conference report was adopted by the senate.

An appropriation of $2,535,000 is to be available for the beginning of the work. No agreement was reached as to size, dimensions or armament.

The naval bill in other respects was adopted as approved by the previous conference, and is now acceptable to house and senate.

The bill also provides for eight submarines. During negotiations between the house and senate that number was once cut to four. The original number will now be provided. This year's building program also will include six torpedo boats, two colliers and one machine ship.

It was agreed that the new battleship should not be a super-dreadnaught, but a vessel of standard size. The question of armament was left to the naval constructors and the secretary of the navy.

The bill also provides for a round-the-world wireless system by which the navy could keep in touch with its ships on practically every part of the globe.

A movement to name the new battleship Constitution has been started. Under the law the secretary of the navy would be obliged to christen the new ship Arizona or New Mexico, but the senate and house conferees will be urged to amend the bill with a provision that the new ship be named after Old Ironsides.

INSISTING ON COMMERCE COURT

Both Branches of Congress Again Pass Bill.

Taft's VETO MAY SAVE IT

Senators Hotly Resent Declaration That Another Disapproval Will Result and Vote for Abolition.

Washington, Aug. 20.—President Taft will probably save the court of commerce.

He told callers that he would stay here until December before he would consent to the court's abolition, and declares his purpose to veto the legislative bill as often as it might come up with that feature in it.

The house is prepared to fight it out with him, but the senate is getting shaky. Conferees held among senators reveal that the bill cannot be passed over the veto by the senate.

After a spirited debate the senate repassed the vetoed legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, still carrying a provision for the abolition of the commerce court.

A majority of the appropriations committee reported the bill with a provision for the retention of the court. When this was eliminated Mr. Taft's friends predicted that the bill again would be vetoed.

The senate agreed with the house in leaving out the provision to limit tenure of office of civil service employees to seven years to which the president also had objected.

"There is no secret about the fact," said Senator Warren, of the commerce court provision, "that if this bill goes to the president with this clause left in we will get another veto. It is just a question of whether we want to get through here and get home, or whether we want to stay here and pass bills and get vetoes ad infinitum."

Senator Clapp, Progressive, of Minnesota, leaped to his feet.

"Mr. President," he shouted, "this is not a question of getting through and getting home. This is a question of doing what we believe to be our duty."

"Both the house and senate have voted by large majorities to abolish this court," protested Senator Overman. "The people of the United States have signified their desire that the court should be abolished. The president of the United States is now lined up against the people. The house will insist on abolishing the court, and I protest that we should stand by them."

Senator Bacon, of Georgia, objected to the stand of Senator Warren. "I rise to a point of order," he exclaimed. "I believe that it is absolutely out of order to attempt to influence the votes of senators by threatening them with what the president will or will not do."

Senator Warren replied that he was only stating facts.

Senator Overman's substitute containing a provision to abolish the court was adopted, 35 to 23. The Republicans who voted with the Democrats to pass it were: Senators Borah, Bourne, Bristow, Clapp, Crawford, Cummings, Fall, Heyburn, La Follette, Nelson, Poindexter and Works. Senator Thornton, of Louisiana, was the only Democrat who voted against the substitute to abolish the court.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 20.—Lightning played a peculiar prank at the home of Michael Pulaski.

Paper on the wall was burned, and the family cat, which was in the center of the room, was killed. Not one of the ten persons received even a shock.

The husband, Warren Sanders, then shot to death Mrs. George Griffith, his wife's mother, and fled from a mob to the police station, where he surrendered.

Will Succeed Hanford.

LAWYER SHOT DOWN BY WOMAN IN OFFICE

Staten Island Prosecutor Seriously Wounded.

New York, Aug. 20.—Albert C. Fach, district attorney of Richmond county, was shot and seriously injured by a woman in Stapleton, Staten Island, just after he reached his private office. He was hurried to the S. R. Smith infirmary, at New Brighton.

The shooting was done by Mrs. Elizabeth Edmunds, believed to be a domestic. She says she is the wife of Dr. John F. Edmunds, of Sixth avenue, Manhattan, a dentist, and trouble with her husband, it is asserted, led to the shooting. She fired three shots at the district attorney and all took effect.

Several days ago, after receiving several threatening letters from Mrs. Edmunds, Mr. Fach consulted friends about the advisability of having a bodyguard. A minute or two after he reached his office Mrs. Edmunds entered. She at once went up to Mr. Fach, drew a revolver from under a coat she carried on her arm, and began shooting. Before any one could reach her she had fired three times. One bullet hit Mr. Fach in the left shoulder, another in the right leg, and the third entered his right arm and penetrated the body.

The shots were fired at a distance of a few feet from a heavy weapon. Mrs. Edmunds offered no resistance to those who rushed upon her.

KILLS FOUR AND HIMSELF

Sudden Attack of Insanity Results in Strange Crime.

London, Aug. 20.—Captain Hicks Murray, of the Gordon Highlanders, at Eastbourne, a fashionable seaside resort, shot and killed his wife's sister, her two children and a servant, wounded his wife, set fire to the house in which the tragedy occurred and then killed himself with the pistol he had used upon the others.

Of the household the only survivor is Mrs. Murray, who was found wandering in the vicinity, suffering from a severe wound and unable or unwilling to explain the circumstances of the tragedy. In a silver vase in the vestibule of the house when the fire had been extinguished was British coin of the value of $160, indicating that poverty was not the cause of the tragedy, and it is believed that Captain Murray suddenly became insane.

Beside his body when it was reached were a pistol and a can of petrol. Murray left a letter in which he said: "I am hopelessly ruined and have for this reason killed all those dependent on me. I should like all of us to be buried in one grave. God forgive me."

CHAPTER XIX.

In Which the Minister Receives a Letter.

John Ellery was uneasy. Physically he was very much better, so much better that he was permitted to sit up a while each day. But mentally he was disturbed and excited, exactly the condition which the doctor said he must not be in. Keziah and Grace had gone away and left him, and he could not understand why.

Mrs. Higgins, like's mother, was at the shanty and she did her best to soothe and quiet him. She was a kind soul and capable, in her way, but she could not answer his questions satisfactorily.

He rose from the chair and started toward the living room. He would not be put off again. He would be answered. His hand was on the latch of the door when that door was opened. Dr. Parker came in.

The doctor was smiling broadly. His ruddy face was actually beaming. He held out his hand, seized the minister's, and shook it.

"Good morning, Mr. Ellery," he said. "It's a glorious day. Yes, sir, a bully day. Hey? Isn't it?"

Ellery's answer was a question.

"Doctor," he said, "why have Mrs. Coffin and—Miss Van Horne gone? Has anything happened? I know something has, and you must tell me what. Don't try to put me off or give me evasive answers. I want to know why they have gone."

Parker looked at him keenly. "Humph!" he grunted. "I'll have to get into Mrs. Higgins's wig. You sit still. No, I'm not going to tell you anything. You sit where you are and maybe the news'll come to you. If you move it won't. Going to obey orders? Good! I'll see you by and by, Mr. Ellery."

He walked out of the room. It seemed to Ellery that he sat in that chair for ten thousand years before the door again opened. And then—

"Grace!" he cried. "O Grace! you—you've come back!"

She was blushing red, her face was radiant with quiet happiness, but her eyes were moist. She crossed the room, bent over and kissed him on the forehead.

"Yes, John," she said. "I've come back. Yes, dear, I've come back to you."

Outside the shanty, on the side farthest from the light and its group of buildings, the doctor and Captain Nat Hammond were talking with Mrs. Higgins. The latter was wildly excited and bubbling with joy.

"It's splendid!" he exclaimed. "It's almost too fine to believe. Now we'll keep our minister, won't we?"

Mrs. Higgins turned to Captain Nat. "It's kind of hard for you, Nat," she added. "But it's awful noble and self-sacrificing and everybody'll say so. Of course there wouldn't be much satisfaction in havin' a wife you knew cared more for another man. But still it's a awful noble of you to give her up."

The captain looked at the doctor and laughed quietly.

"Don't let my nobility weigh on your mind, Mrs. Higgins," he said. "I'd made up my mind to do this very thing afore ever I got back to Trumet. That is, if Grace was willin'. And when I found she was not only willin' but joyful, I—well, I decided to offer up the sacrifice right off."

"You did? You did? Why, how you talk! I never heard of such a thing in my born days."

"Oh, well, I—What is it, Grace?"

She was standing in the doorway and beckoning to him. Her cheeks were crimson, the breeze was tossing her hair about her forehead, and she made a picture that even the practical, unromantic doctor appreciated.

The captain went to meet her.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Nat," she whispered, "will you come in? He wants to see you."

John Ellery was still seated in the chair by the window, but he no longer looked like an invalid. There was no worry or care in his countenance now, merely a wondrous joy and serene happiness.

He held out his hands and the captain shook them heartily.

"Mr. Ellery," he said, "as they used to say at the circus, 'Here we are again.' And you and I have been doing all kinds of circus acrobatics since we shook last, hey? I'm glad you're pretty nigh out of the sick bay—and the doctor says you are."

"Captain," began Ellery. Hammond interrupted him.

"Hold on!" he said. "Belay right there. If you and I are to cruise in the same family—and that's what I hear is likely to happen—I callate we'll heave overboard the cap'n and Mister. My name's 'Nathaniel'—Nat' for short."

"All right. And mine is 'John.' Captain—Nat, I mean—how can I ever thank you?"

"Thank me? What do you want to thank me for? I only handed over something that wasn't mine in the first place and belonged to you all along. I didn't know it, that was the only trouble."

"But your promise to your father. I feel—"

"You needn't. I'm doin' the right thing and I know it. And don't pity me, neither. I made up my mind not to marry Grace—unless, of course, she was set on it—months ago. I'm set on it to death to know and go in to have as good a man as you are. She'll tell you so. Grace! Hello! she's gone."

"Yes. I told her I wanted to talk with you alone, for a few minutes. Nat, Grace tells me that Aunt Keziah was the one who—"

"She was. She met me at the Cohasset Narrows depot. I was settin' in the car, lookin' out of the window at the sand and sniffin' the Cape air, somebody tapped me on the shoulder. I looked up and 'twas her. I was surprised enough to see her, I tell you. Way up there at the Narrows! I couldn't have said a word, anyway, and she never gave me a chance. 'Nat,' she says, 'don't talk now. Come with me, quick afore the train starts. I've come here on purpose to meet you. I must talk with you; it's important. You can go to Trumet on the next train, tonight. But now I must talk with you. I must. Won't you please come, Nat?'"

"Well, I went. The engine bell was beginnin' to ring and we had to move lively, I tell you. I swung her off the step just as the car begun to move. So into the waitin' room we went and come to anchor on the settee. And then, John, we had our talk. Seems she left Trumet Wednesday afternoon. Got the livery stable man to drive her as far as Bayport, hired another team there and come on to Sandwich. Stayed overnight there and took the mornin' train which got to Cohasset Narrows just ahead of the one I was comin' on. She'd been so fraid of bein' late, she said. She must see me afore I got to Trumet."

"Well, she saw me and told me the whole yarn about you and Grace. She tried to break it to me gently, so I wouldn't feel too bad. She knew it would be a shock to me, she said. It was a shock, in a way, but as for feelin' bad, I didn't. I think the world of Grace. I'd do anything she wanted me to do; but most the way down on the train—yes, and long afore that—I'd been dreadin' my comin' home on one account. I dreaded tellin' her that, unless she was real set on it, she'd better not marry me."

"Nat, I want to tell you something. Something that only one other person knows. Grace doesn't know it yet. Neither does Aunt Keziah—the whole of it. And if she knew I told you even a part I'm afraid she would, as she would say, 'skin me alive.' But I owe her—and you—more than I could repay if I lived a thousand years. So I'm going to tell and take the consequences."

"Nat, when—that morning after your father died and after you and Grace had agreed to—to—"

"To do somethin' neither of us wanted to do? Yes, I know. Go ahead."

"That morning Aunt Keziah came home to the parsonage and broke the news to me. She did it as only she could do such a thing, kindly and pityingly and I made a fool of myself, I expect; refused to believe her, behaved disgracefully, and at last, when I had to believe it, threatened to run away and leave my work and Trumet forever, like a coward. She made me stay."

"Did, hey?"

"Yes, she showed me it was my duty to face the music. When I whimpered about my troubles she told me her own story. Then I learned what trouble was and what pluck was, too. She told me about her marriage and—excuse me for speakin' of what isn't my business; yet it is mine, in a way—she told me about you."

Captain Hammond did not answer. His good-natured face clouded and he shifted in his chair.

"She told me of you, Nat, all about you—and herself. And she told me something else, which explains why she felt she must send you away, why she thought your marriage to Grace would be a good thing."

"I know. She told you that that darn scamp Anse Coffin was alive."

The minister started violently. He gasped in surprise.

"You knew it? You knew it?" he stammered.

"I know it now. Have known it for over a year. My findin' it out was one of the special Providences that's been here along this last voyage of mine. My second mate was a Hyannis man, name of Caboon. One day, on that pesky island, when we was eatin' dinner together, he says to me, 'Cap'n, he says, you're from Trumet, ain't you?' I owned up. 'Know anybody named Coffin there?' says he. I owned up to that, too. 'Well,' he says, 'I met her husband last trip I was in the Glory of the Wave.' I stared at him. 'Met his ghost, you mean,' I says. 'He's been dead for years, and a good thing, too. Fell overboard and, not bein' used to water, it killed him.' 'But he wouldn't have it so. 'I used to know Anse Coffin in New Bedford,' he says. 'Knew him well's I know you. And when we was in port at Havre I dropped in at a gin mill down by the water front and he come up and touched be on the arm. I thought same as you, that he was dead, but he wa'n't. He was three sheets in the wind and a regular dock rat to look at, but 'twas him sure enough. We had a long talk. He said he was comin' back to Trumet some day. Had a wife there, he said. I told him, sarcastic, that she'd be glad to see him. He laughed and said maybe not, but that she knew he was alive and sent him money when he was hard up. Wanted me to promise not to tell any Cape folks that I'd seen him, and I ain't till now.'"

"Well, you can imagine how I felt when Caboon spun me that yarn. First I wouldn't believe it and then I did. It explained things, just as you say, John. I could see now why Keziah gave me my walkin' papers. I could see how she'd been sacrificin' her life for that scum."

"Did you tell her—Aunt Keziah—when you met her at the Narrows?"

"No. But I shall tell her when I see her again. She shan't spoil her life—a woman like that! by the Lord! what a woman!—for any such crazy notion. I swore it when I heard the story and I've sworn it every day since. That's what settled my mind about Grace. Keziah Coffin belongs to me. She always has belonged to me, even though my own pig-headedness lost her in the old days."

He was pacing the floor now, his face set like granite. Ellery rose, his own face beaming. Here was his chance. At last he could pay to this man and Keziah a part of the debt he owed.

"Nat stopped in his stride. 'Well!' he exclaimed. 'I almost forgot, after all. Keziah sent a note to you. I've got it in my pocket. She gave it to me when she left me at Cohasset.' 'Left you? Why! didn't she come back with you on the night train?' 'No. That's funny, too, and I don't understand it yet. We was together

"Yes, John," she said, "I've come back to you."

all the afternoon. I was feelin' so good at seein' her that I took her under my wing and we cruised all over that town together. Got dinner at the tavern and she went with me to buy myself a new hat, and all that. At first she didn't seem to want to, but then, after I'd coaxed a while, she did. She was lookin' pretty sad and worn out, when I first met her, I thought; but she seemed to get over it and we had a fine time. It reminded me of the days when I used to get home from a voyage and we were together. Then, when 'twas time for the night train we went down to the depot. She gave me this note and told me to hand it to you today."

"Good-by, Nat," she says. 'We've had a nice day, haven't we?' 'We have, for a fact,' I says. 'But what are you sayin' good-by for?' 'Because I'm not goin' to Trumet with you,' says she. 'I'm goin' to the city. I've got some business to see to there. Good-by.'"

"I was set back, with all my canvas flappin'. I told her I'd go to Boston with her and we'd come home to Trumet together tomorrow, that's today. But she said no. I must come here and ease your mind and Grace's. I must do it. So at last I agreed to, sayin' I'd see her in a little while. She went on the up train and I took the down one. Hired a team in Sandwich and another in Bayport and got to the tavern about eleven. That's the yarn. And here's your note. Maybe it tells where she's gone and why."

The minister took the note and tore open the envelope. Within was a single sheet of paper. He read a few lines, stopped, and uttered an exclamation.

"What's the matter?" asked the captain.

Ellery did not answer. He read the note through and then, without a word, handed it to his friend.

The note was as follows:

"Dear John:

"I am going away, as I told you I would if he came. He is coming. Tuesday I got a letter from him. It was written at Kingston, Jamaica, almost three months ago. I can't think why I haven't got it sooner, but suppose it was given to some one to mail and forgotten. In it he said he was tired of going to sea and was coming home to me. I had money, he said, and we could get along. He had shipped aboard a brig bound for Savannah, and from there he was going to try for a berth on a Boston-bound vessel. So I am going away and not coming back. I could not stand the disgrace and I could not see him. You and Grace won't need me any more now. Don't worry about me. I can always earn a living while I have my strength. Please don't worry. If he comes tell him I have gone you do not know where. That will be true, for you don't. I hope you will be very happy. I do hope so. Oh, John, you don't know how I hate to do this, but I must. Don't tell Nat. He would do something terrible to him if he came, and Nat knew. Just say I have been called away and may be back some time. Perhaps I may. Love to all. Good-by."

"Yours truly,

"KEZIAH COFFIN."

The captain stared at the note. Then he threw it to the floor and started for the door. The minister sprang from his chair and called to him.

"Nat," he cried. "Nat! Stop! where are you going?"

Hammond turned.

"Goin'?" he growled. "Goin'! I'm goin' to find her, first of all. Then I'm comin' back to wait for him."

"But you won't have to wait. He'll never come. He's dead."

"Dead? Dead? By the everlastin'! this has been too much for you, I ought to have known it. I'll send the doctor here right off. I can't stay myself. I've got to go. But—"

"Listen! listen to me! Ansel Coffin is dead, I tell you. I know it. I know all about it. That was what I wanted to see you about. Did Keziah tell you of the San Jose and the sailor who died of smallpox in this very building? In that room there?"

"Yes, John, you—"

"I'm not ravin'. It's the truth. That sailor was Ansel Coffin. I watched with him and one night, the night before he died, he spoke Keziah's name. He spoke of New Bedford and of Trumet and of her, over and over again. I was sure who he was then, but I called in Ebenezer Capen, who used to know Coffin in New Bedford. And he recognized him. Nat, as sure as you and I are here this minute, Ansel Coffin, Aunt Keziah's husband, is buried in the Trumet cemetery."

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Clean up and disinfect.

Every farmer should have a garden.

Turn the horse out to pasture at night.

Overexertion is as bad for the colts as no exertion.

Now that cows are on grass they will need salt oftener.

Sheep, unlike hogs, need to be dipped only once a year.

The well-fed colt requires more exercise than the poorly fed one.

There is little use in wasting time over a crippled or deformed chick.

Poultry can not stand any more neglect in warm weather than in cold.

A mongrel fowl is one that has resulted from the haphazard mating for years.

One good sire can do wonders in improving the dairy herds of a neighborhood.

If a horse is required to do extra work he should be liberally and frequently fed.

Don't keep tapping your horse with the whip unless you want to drive a regular old plug.

Generous feeding and frequent salting will help to fortify the lambs against the parasites.

Dipping does more than merely kill lice. Disease germs, especially in the case of hogs, are destroyed.

No matter how good their conformation, the vast majority of little horses sell at corresponding little prices.

Give the cows a fair show. To expect a large flow of rich milk from them on insufficient or poor feed is unjust.

Corn lands should be put in the best possible condition so that the little roots can get the most nourishment out of the soil.

Cattle that have been well wintered can be put on the early grass fat market and good judges think this market will be a high one.

Under ordinary circumstances the poorer the feed the greater the daily cost of milk and butter-fat, and the less will be the profit.

As warm weather approaches the task of preventing drinking water for hogs from becoming contaminated becomes more and more difficult.

Of later years the Clydesdales have been coming on in draft horse popularity and the breed is now occupying quite a place among the pullers.

The old ducks need a swimming pond, as their feathers will not be nearly so good without the water and their eggs will be much more fertile.

Clover hay can be put in the mow safely with more sap in it than timothy, but neither will keep without molding when put in with dew or rain on it.

It costs from two to six cents more to produce a pound of fat pork than a pound of ordinary bacon, but the difference is on the other side at market time.

Alfalfa makes the best pasture, but peas and oats sown in equal parts, also rape, clover and a mixture of wheat and oats sown thickly makes excellent pig forage.

Most all our gardens can be at least double cropped by selecting early varieties of vegetables such as cabbage, lettuce, onions, beets, bunch beans, potatoes and early corn.

As soon as the pigs have been put into the fattening pens in the fall they should be fed all that they will eat with a relish; for the shorter the fattening period the larger the profits.

Before starting up a hill with a load, and when the top of the hill is reached, give the team a rest. Let them catch their breath. Undue forcing of horses up a hill with a load frequently causes heart and lung disorders.

Of two colts similar in disposition and sense, one may develop into a steady and valuable family horse, while the other may be everything that is vicious, treacherous and unsafe—all because of the difference in the men handling them.

Shallow cultivation of corn is most in favor with the experiment stations, but much seems to depend upon climatic conditions. In dry climates you can safely cultivate deeper—three to four inches.

There is nothing like pasture to make good gains on any kind of stock when fed in connection with corn. In hog feeding we do not think we are putting it too strongly to say that pasture saves 25 per cent in feed.

Not Provided For.

A traveling salesman in the employ of a large bicycle manufacturer was obliged to go on a business trip about the time an interesting domestic event was expected. The salesman desired his sister to wire him results, according to a formula something like this:

"A boy, 'Man's safety arrived.'"

"A girl, 'Lady's safety arrived.'"

To the astonishment and chagrin of the father-elect, he had been gone but a few days when he received a telegram containing one word.

"Tandem."—Tit-Bits.

A Cabinet Job.

"A president has to eat a good deal these times."

"What do you mean?"

"The chief executive has to attend a great many banquets and the like."

"Seems so. What about it?"

"I was just thinking that the next president ought to recognize the growing importance of this social side of the job and appoint an addition to the cabinet in the shape of a toast master general."

The Truth at Last.

The Hibernian society has been discussing the popular stage Irishman and the popular idea concerning Irish bulls. The vote stood that the usual ideas were erroneous. The chairman added by way of causal information: "Sure, half the lies told about the Irish aren't thurs."—Satire.

Jimmy (fishing)—I ain't gittin' a bite.
